INTRODUCTION

THIS society printed in volumes 122 and 133 of its publications certain sixteenth century herald's visitations of the northern counties of England, edited by Dr. F. W. Dendy and entitled Visitations of the North. The Great War and other obstacles prevented the completion of the work as foreshadowed in the introduction to volume 122, pp. xlv-xlvi. Some years later the late Rev. C. V. Collier undertook to complete the series, but he had made little progress with it before his lamented death in 1929, when the present editor took over the work. To complete the plan outlined in volume 122, p. xlv, required only the publication of the 1575 visitation pedigrees of Northumberland and Yorkshire, but it was thought desirable to include, as suggested in the introduction to volume 133, the collection of early northern pedigrees contained in MS. Ashmole no. 831, the great value of which had been pointed out by Dr. H. H. E. Craster of the Bodleian Library, Oxford.

When, however, the present editor had prepared the three visitations for the press it was found that the cost of printing them in one volume was prohibitive; it was therefore decided to print, in this volume, only the pedigrees in MS. Ashmole 831, leaving the two visitations of 1575 for a future volume. This volume therefore now contains only the pedigrees in MS. Ashmole no. 831, folios 1^{v}-87^{v}, in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, collated with MS. Dodsworth no. 81 in the same library.

The manuscript from which these pedigrees are copied is entitled Stemmata vetusta prosapiarum regiarum Angliae et Galliae nobiliumque multarum Anglicarum a Roberto Glovero collecta atque transcripta.

The manuscript is thus a copy made by Robert Glover (1544-88), pursuivant and herald, of an old manuscript, now lost, which may have been the official record of an heraldic visitation of the northern counties made in the later part of the fifteenth century.

The names of the possible visiting heralds are unknown, but during the relevant time John Wrythe (1478-1504) was Garter King of Arms and Roger Machado (1485-93) and Christopher Carhill (1493-1510) were successively Norroy Kings of Arms.

Glover gives no title to his transcript, which is written in his formal secretary-hand with additions made by him in less formal writing. The Catalogue of the Ashmole manuscripts thus describes it: "The first manuscript in this large folio volume is large enough to form a separate volume; it is fairly and widely written in the secretary-hand and vertically for the more ready continuation of the pedigrees from page to page; they are tricked in red roundles with red lines." Roger Dodsworth (1585-1654) also made a copy, now contained in MS. Dodsworth no. 81, of the same roll though possibly from a different manuscript to that used by Glover. In his copy he refers to the original as "my antient rolle of petigrees," adding "which are very authenticall and cited by Mr. Camden" (post p. 23). Dodsworth's copy is only a partial one, differing in details from Glover's, but while it does not give all that are in the latter's copy it does not include any pedigree which can be assigned to the late fifteenth century and which is not in MS. Ashmole 831. A collection of pedigrees similar to those here printed occurs in Add. MS. no. 5530 in the British Museum, in the handwriting of sir Thomas Writh (or Wriothesley), Garter King of Arms (1504-34); a few also occur in Add. MS. 38133[1] which is connected with Robert Aske (d. 1537); both these versions appear to have been taken from a common source.

The version here printed is a verbatim copy of MS. Ashmole no. 831 collated with MS. Dodsworth no. 81. The additions from Dodsworth's copy are printed in italics; the names omitted by him are enclosed in round brackets; any additions made by the present editor are in square brackets. This manuscript was evidently one of the primary sources of the Norcliffe MS. printed in volume XVI of the publications of the Harleian society,[2] the original of which has hitherto been untraced. The compiler of that manuscript translated the greater part of his original into English, whilst sixteen of the pedigrees here printed do not appear in the Harleian volume.[3]

[1] A list of the pedigrees contained in these MSS. is printed in the Appendices post pp. 167 and 171.

[2] SS 122, p. xlvi ff.

[3] Ashton (2), Brandon, Darell, Daubeny, Fauconberg, Fitzhugh, Goushill, Helperby, Lassels, Montagu, Moubray, Poull, Roos, Saige and Toft.

If the suggestion made above, that the original manuscript contained the official record of a herald's visitation is right, then it is the earliest known and the first fruits of the incorporation of the College of Arms by Richard III in 1483. The first visitation to be made under a Royal Commission was that of 1528-29.[4] The pedigrees themselves bear authentic marks of being such a record; they are also, so far as the present editor has been able to test them, of high quality and of general accuracy, fully justifying Dodsworth's verdict of " very authenticall."

They are also remarkable for the intimate details recorded of the different families and give the impression that their maker got his information at first hand in personal touch with living members of the particular family whose pedigree he entered.

Such details as the following seem, to the editor, to point to this. Stanhope (p. 13) holds the third part of Touxford in Clay by knight's fee and can spend four hundred marks of rent per annum. Conyers (p. 92) can spend a thousand marks of rent a year. Clervaux (p. 104) can spend three hundred marks a year. Strangwais (p. 106) can spend a thousand marks or more a year and, not to extend the list unduly, Agnes a younger daughter of John Vavasour (p. 69) married John Bekwith of Clint who has twenty marks a year.

The care taken to enumerate the numerous younger children of a family and to record their marriages or very frequent early deaths also leads to the same conclusion. So also do such details as that Richard, second son of John Vavasour and his wife Isabel de la Haye, is " marred in the Spirit " (p. 59) or that Joan and Eleanor, daughters of Henry lord Fitzhugh, are twins and Joan is a nun at Dartford (p. 133).

The pedigrees are interesting to the student of the social history of the time, for they give first-hand evidence of the large families then usual, of the high death rate amongst young children, and of the frequent re-marriages of the heads of families and of heiresses as well as of the custom of unmarried daughters and widows adopting a religious life. Of the former, nuns are mentioned at the Yorkshire monasteries of Swine (p. 102), Watton (p. 131), Ellerton (p. 125), Sinningthwaite (pp. 69 and 118) and at others farther afield such as Rusper (p. 103), Dartford (pp. 132/3) and Barking (p. 139) as well as some whose monasteries are not named. Of the latter, for example, Margery widow of lord Scrope became a minoress at London (p. 41). The widows of Nicholas Fitzwilliam (p. 76) and sir John Constable (p. 102) were both veiled after their husbands' deaths.

The pedigrees are in Latin except that of the royal house of France (pp. 6/8) and that of Montagu (pp. 49/50) which are in Old French. The manuscript begins with the pedigree of the sovereigns of England from William the Conqueror to Edward IV; this was apparently compiled to show the righteous claim by descent of the House of York, and Edward's in particular, to the crown; it omits the Black Prince and Richard II. The pedigree of France gives four descents from St. Louis to show the right of Edward III to the throne of France. The pedigrees do not appear to have all been made in the same year, but fall, for the most part, within the last twenty years of the fifteenth century. That of the royal house dates before 9 April 1483, when Edward IV died, but it is not earlier than 10 November 1480, when his daughter Bridget was born.[5] It will be seen from the notes appended to the pedigrees that most of them date a few years later than that of the royal house. The following examples, chosen more or less at random, show this: Knyvett (p. 10) is not earlier than 6 January 1486/87, when Henry Colet was mayor of London; he was knighted on that day when the king "was keeping his estate at Whitehall being crowned." Musgrave (p. 15) dates after 10 January 1483/84 when Edward Musgrave had license to marry his first wife and before 27 October 1496, the date of the license for his second marriage. Percy (p. 18) is before the murder of the fourth earl of Northumberland at Cocklodge in 1489. Neville (p. 32) dates between the execution of William lord Hastings on 13 June 1483 and the restitution of the barony to his son Edward on 15 December 1487. Clervaux (p. 104) dates before Richard Clervaux was knighted by Henry VII at Croft on St. Laurence Eve 1487. Vavasour (p. 59) dates after 1490 when John Vavasour was made "one of the kinge's justices of the Common Bank." Fitzwilliam (p. 74) dates after 23 May 1491, when sir Thomas Wortley had license to marry Catherine Fitzwilliam. There are, however, at least two of the pedigrees which are of a later date; that of Mowbray (p. 86) goes to Thomas Howard, treasurer of England 1522, duke of Norfolk 1524; whilst that of Roos (Espec, p. 161) is carried down to Thomas Manners, created earl of Rutland 1525, and mentions William Harvey, Clarenceux, who did not fill that office until 21 November 1557. The shields also in this pedigree are blazoned in tinctures, not precious stones, and in Old French not Latin. These two are probably later additions to the original.

[5] Sandford, Genealogical History, p. 418

The pedigrees therefore date in the main soon after the battle of Bosworth (1485)—Redmore it is called here—had ended the Wars of the Roses and seated the Tudors firmly upon the throne. The long civil wars had made an end of the pedigrees and broken in pieces the shields of most of the old feudal nobility, for though some of them are here they seem to be as memorials of a dead past, the words decapitatus, decollatus or occisus marking the end. Of these may be noted the great house of Neville (p. 23) whose pedigree here shows clearly their descent from the heiress of Bulmer and from the Englishman, Robert son of Meldred; it agrees substantially with the latest study of the origins of that famous family.[6] Others, of these old families, are Daubeny, Grey, Lacy, Percy and Moubray; in this last pedigree is included part of the pedigree of the Howards dukes of Norfolk—here spelt Haward, probably its original form. Many pedigrees of Yorkist families are here, but the new men who rose to eminence under the double rose of the Tudors also appear. Of these Brandon, Widville and Wingfield are examples. Sir William Brandon (p. 120) carries the shield of Henry Tudor at Redmore and is killed there, his brother sir Thomas was king Henry's esquire at the later battle of Stoke (1487) and Thomas Wingfield (p. 122) was slain fighting on Henry's side at Bosworth field.

There is as yet little sign of the craze for Saxon or Norman ancestors, whose production formed so lucrative a trade for the kings of arms and heralds of later Tudor and early Stuart times.

The circular and very unsatisfactory pedigree of Markington (p. 135), whose form seems to show that the heralds had not yet learnt how to give such a pedigree the appearance of truth, is the only one here to claim a Saxon progenitor. Fitzwilliam (p. 74), however, comes with the Conqueror and is marshal of his army—vain tales foreshadowing others so often to be told of even less distinguished families during the ensuing hundred years.

[6] Studies in Family Origins, pp. 54-9, by J. H. Round, 1930.

The care with which the numerous shields of arms and crests are blazoned is another proof that the whole is the official work of a "learned herald." Shields are given for about half of the families. The blazon is in Old French, and with one or two exceptions it is in terms of precious stones, part of that curious and fantastic pedantry, deriving probably from a German source, which, towards the end of the fifteenth century, did so much to bring the beautiful art of armory into ridicule.[7] This fantasy blazoned the arms of sovereigns and princes in terms of the planets and of peers in those of precious stones; the arms of less important persons were left in the tinctures of ordinary blazon. Here, however, precious stones are used for very ordinary people as well as for lords of parliament.

The following table explains the system:

Colour	Tincture	Planets	Precious Stones
Yellow	Or	Sol	Topaz
White	Argent	Luna	Pearl
Black	Sable	Saturn	Diamond
Red	Gules	Mars	Ruby
Blue	Azure	Jupiter	Sapphire
Green	Vert	Venus	Emerald
Purple	Purpure	Mercury	Amethyst

The editor knows of no example of this method except in this manuscript. Even those authors who write of it most enthusiastically and most foolishly yet do not use it in actual practice but blazon in the ordinary terms of armory either in Latin, French or English. In the earliest book upon armorials known to the editor, the Tractatus de Insigniis et Armis, written circa 1353 by Dr. Bartholus de Saxoferrato, though the attributes of armorial colours are explained in the pseudo-philosophic manner of the time there is yet no mention of precious stones nor of their supposed properties nor is there in the similar work, written for Anne, wife of Richard II, who died in 1394, by Johannes de Bado Aureo (John of Guildford) entitled Tractatus de Armis cum

[7] Those given in modern terms within brackets are additions by the present editor.

Francisco Foveis.[8] The treatise of Nicholas Upton, canon of Salisbury and Wells, written circa 1441,[9] contains the first mention, known to the editor, of the precious stone armorial fantasy.

In the chapter entitled De Militari Officio, Liber III (p. 105), after a long dissertation de colore aurco the author proceeds " hujus enim coloris aurei est quidam lapis vocatus Topasius qui quanto est rarior tanto est pretiosior; habet colorem ex auro et ethera, claritate lucens maxime quando tangitur radio soli." He, however, leaves these vain imaginings when he comes to actual armorials, which he blazons in Latin and French after the ancient manner. Dame Juliane Berners, writing circa 1486 in the armorial part of The Bokc of St. Albans,[10] which is in great part a translation or paraphrase of Upton's book, is the first author writing in English who discusses the precious stone fantasy; she says " and thys lawe of Armys was grounded uppon the IV (sic) orderys of angelis in heven encrowned with IV dyvers precious stonys of colouris and of vertues dyveris, also of them are figured the IV colouris of armys. The first stone is calde Topasion signyfying golde in armys. This stone Topasion is a semy stone and golde it is called in armys. The vertue thereof is that the gentilman the whiche thys stone in his cote armure berith a fare messengere in his kynges batyll shall be " and so on. The lady Juliane, however, does not venture to blazon in terms of these stones; like her predecessors she uses good Latin and French armorial terms, but she adds one in English as well, e.g., " St. George: He beris a Selde of silver with a playne cros of gowles."

These early armorial writers therefore, whilst writing of a strange pseudo-science and indulging their wayward fancies in the narrative parts of their treatises, yet when it comes to actual practice restrain their imaginations and blazon in the usual way.

Another feature of the manuscript of much interest to the student of armory is the precise, detailed descriptions of the crests with their mantling and " torche," i.e., torque or wreath. Such descriptions are very rare in early English armorial manuscripts and for many of the crests here there is no earlier record, except so far as some of them appear on seals or effigies. The original of this MS. has evidently been one of the sources of Thomas Wall's Book of Crests, of circa A.D. 1530, published in volumes XI or XII of The Ancestor. They are there blazoned in Tudor English, but in examples where the same crests appear in both works the English is a literal translation of the earlier French. For example: Stanhope (p. 13) wears his "monceau de herbes qui ont les fleurs pendens comme clochettes," Wall has . . . the flowers hanging like bellcs. Tancard (p. 46)—une buisson d'arbre olive which Wall gives as a bush of olive tree. Clervaux (p. 104)—une grue asisie en une torche . . . sans monstrer les jambes which Wall has a crane . . . sette without shewing his legs. Aske (p. 96)—une teste de Sarrasin nue, Wall a sarazin's head naked. It will be seen therefore that the manuscript here printed is of much interest as well from the armorial as from the genealogical point of view.

It remains only for the editor to give his grateful thanks to Dr. H. H. E. Craster who, in addition to discovering this "antient rolle" and pointing out its value, has given the editor much advice and generous assistance. The editor has also to acknowledge similar help from the society's secretary, Dr. A. Hamilton Thompson, who has read many of the proofs and assisted much in putting the volume through the press.

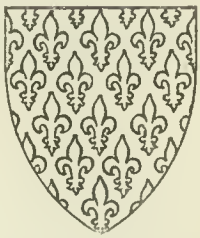
[FRANCE]

Ceste escripture declaire briefment par figueres de genealogie et prochainete de lignaige que Edward de Windesore Roy de France et Dangleterre le quel entre les Roys Dengleterre premierement par succession vint au droit de la Coronne et du Royaulme de Fraunce par ses Orateurs et Ambassadeurs fit par articles remonstrere et declairer a nostre Saint pere le Pape et a pluseurs temporelz Princes christiens en poursuiuant le bon droict quil avoit a la dicte couroune et au Royaulme. A fin se en, apres pour celle cause lui convenoit faire gueire quil fust notoire par tout le monde sa cause et sa querelle estre Iustes et raisonnables. Et semblablement que l'obeissance des subgiectz et la faueur et adherence des estrangiers qui en ceste partie seroint faictes et donnes a luj et a ses Successeurs es temps aduenir en continuant icelle poursuite par force darmes et autrement aucun ne puist par raison blamer ne callumpnier.

Et au contraire de ce oue quelque chose qui depuis ait este faicte par Philippe Conte de Valois ses adherens ou fauorisans et ce que en apres sera fait par leurs hoirs ou Successeurs a lencontre de la dicte poursuite Royal doye par Raison estre dit et repute auoir este et estre iniuestement fait par gens obstinez de couraige endurcy non voulans recognoistre et confesser la voye de verite et de Iustice.

Monseigneur Saint Lois[1] estoit en son viuant sur terre vray e paisible Roy de France



[France, old]

Phelippe[2] filz du dit Saint Loys fut aussi paisible Roy: et de lui furent procrees le Roy Phelippe le Bel et Charles Conte de Valois

Phelippe le Bel[3] semblement paisible Roy de France engendra trois filz qui successiuement tous furent Roys de Fraunce et vne fille mariee a Edward de Carnarvan Roy dangleterre

Monsieur Robert de Hilton Port esquartele le premier quartier perle a trois chapeles Ruby le ij[d] quartier Perle a deulx barres saphir et vne flour de lis toupace[1]

[1] The arms are those of Hilton of Swine in Holderness. Quarters I-IV are those of Lascelles, their maternal ancestors. Robert of Hilton, co. Durham, gave Swine to his second son William upon his marriage with Maud daughter of sir Roger Lascelles. The arms are blazoned for their son Robert in the roll of the battle of Boroughbridge D'argent ove iij chapeux de rose (G n.s. II, 31), also in Nicolas' roll, temp. Edward III, p. 40, for Monsire de Hilton de Hodernesse, d'argent a trois chapeletts de rose Vermaux. Roger Lascelles' seal showing three chaplets is BM 11240. Quarters II and III are the arms of Hilton of Hilton deriving probably from the barry shield of Grey (SS 41, p. 36, and AA, 3rd ser., I, p. 121). They are first blazoned in the roll of the battle of Falkirk for sir Robert Hilton who was in the "battle" of the bishop of Durham (Antony Bek)—d'argent a ij barres d'azure. (Reliquary XVI, p. 30 ff.) [1] Name from Musgrave, Westmorland; Hartley near Kirkby Stephen, Westmorland. There is an account of the family in NBWC I, 594 ff., and pedigrees, both different in details from this, in FCW 92/93 and FVY 142/143. A very full pedigree is given PHY 180; it also differs in details from above.

[2] This marriage brought Eden Hall and the Stapleton arms as a quartering.

[3] Died 10 Aug. 1492. (PHY)

[4] License to marry in chapel of sir Edward Ratcliff at Sedbury 10 Jan. 1483-84. (SS 45, 348.) His second wife was Joan daughter of sir Christopher Ward—license for marriage 27 Oct. 1496. (SS 45, 360.)

[5] See NCH IV, 340.

[6] See pedigree SD, new edition, Vol. Sunderland, p. 94. He was sir William Hilton who died 13 Oct. 1457. His widow married Rich. Musgrave and was living in 1477.

[7] Owen second lord Ogle living 1494. (HN II, i, 384.) Eleanor married as her second husband George Percy, grandson of Henry second earl of Northumberland. (SD, op. cit.)

[8] Sir Nicholas Ridley of Willimoteswick died 1537. (HN II, ii, 323.)

[9] He was aged six in 1457. His wife was the daughter of sir William Bowes of Streatlam. (SD, op. cit.) His son William died before 1537.

[10] I.P.M., 10 Nov. 1534. (SD I, 215.)

[11] PHY, 181, calls him "of Newcastle upon Tyne."

[12] Of Hayton castle, Cumberland. (SD I, 215, and PHY, 181.)

[1] Fonblanque's Annals of the house of Percy is the best account of this family. There is also an excellent pedigree in Tate's History of Alnwick I, p. 412 ff.

[2] Josceline's parentage is very doubtful. He was not the eldest son of Godfrey.

[3] This is not so. Henry probably bore the fesse engrele as his son William (SD, 1970[a]) and his grandson Henry certainly did. It is first blazoned in Glover's roll of Henry III for Henry de Percy, d'Azur a la fesse engrele d'or.

[4] The azure lion ramping on a golden field is first used by him. It is blazoned on his banner at the siege of Caerlaverock and is on his seal attached to the Barons' letter (A.D. 1301). It seems most probable that he adopted the lion of his father-in-law the earl of Arundel and differenced it by changing the colours.

[5] Will printed SS 4, p. 57 ff.

[6] Called Hotspur. Killed at the battle of Shrewsbury 21 July 1403.

[7] A.D. 1455.

[8] Bishop of Carlisle 1452-62.

[9] Rothbury, Nortbumberland. Will printed SS 45, pp. 210/11. Proved 9 Dec. 1474.

[10] She was the heiress of William lord Poynings and brought the baronies of Poynings, Fitz Payne and Bryan to the Percys.

[11] Murdered at Cocklodge 1489. Will printed SS 45, p. 304 ff. Proved 9 Aug. 1491. Married about 1476 (OBE II, 653).

[12] Succeeded his father as fifth earl, called "The Magnificent," 1489; died 1527. He married before 1502 Katherine daughter of sir Robert Spencer (OBE II, 654).

[2] There appears no earlier authority for this shield.

[3] According to Whitaker, Alice daughter of William Frank of Alwoodley was his second wife. (Whitaker's Loidis and Elmete 198.)

[4] Heir to his half-brother Henry, he died 6 April 1416 (op. cit.)

[5] Living A.D. 1477. (Whitaker as above.)

[6] His wife was daughter of sir Ralph Pudsey of Bolton. His I.P.M. was taken 1517/18. (Whitaker as above.)

[1] There is no earlier record for this shield sometimes called Neville ancient than this MS. It appears as one of the quarters on the shield of Henry Neville fifth earl of Westmorland on his tomb at Staindrop. (DM 79/80.) The canting device of a ship (nef) is on the seal of Henry Neville c. A.D. 1200 and is blazoned in Grimaldi's roll of Edward III date for Geoffrey de Neville d'or ove une nief maste cables et plane de sable.

[2] Algar prior of Durham granted Staindrop to him by charter A.D. 1131.

[3] Did homage for his lands 1226/27. His armorial seals charged with a saltire are DS 1742 and SND 513. This, blazoned gules a saltire silver, became the well-known shield of the descendants of Robert son of Meldred and Isabel Neville, who adopted the shield of their father but the name of their mother. Pedigrees of Neville SD IV, p. 157 ff. Drummond's Noble British Families, pt. VIII.

[4] He died 1319/20.

[5] Daughter of Thos. Holand, earl of Kent. Sir John Neville died 1423, in his father's lifetime.

[6] Bishop of Durham 1438-57. Bishop of Salisbury 1427-38.

[7] Succeeded as second earl of Westmorland 1425, d. 1484/85. His son by his first wife Elizabeth Percy was slain at St. Albans, 1451. (Will SS 30, 146 ff.)

[8] Killed at Towton 1461.

[9] Succeeded as third earl of Westmorland 1485.

[10] Buried at Chillingham, where their effigies and tomb still remain. (NM, p. 116 ff.)

[11] Bishop of Ely 1454-78. He was archdeacon of Richmond 1449/50-1454.

[12] Created earl of Warwick 2 March 1450. Slain at Barnet 1471.

[13] William (Bonville) lord Harrington, K.G., d. 1457.

[14] Created marquess of Dorset 18 April 1475, d. 1501. His first wife was Anne, daughter of Thos. Holand duke of Exeter. He was married to Cecily 18 July 1474. (CP IV, 418.)

[15] William lord Hastings, K.G., beheaded 13 June 1483 (CP VI, 370-3.)

[16] Should be Edward, K.B. 1475, d. 1506, married, before Feb. 1480/81, Mary suo jure baroness Botreaux; succeeded by grant to the titles and honour of Hastings 15 Dec. 1487. (CP VI, 374.)

Henricus Lacy Comes Lincolnie sepultus Londonijs in ecclesia Sancti Pauli[6]

B

Edmundus obijt ante patrem

Alicia filia et heres Henrici Comitis Lincolnie = Beatus Thomas comes Lancastrie[8]

[1] For the pedigree of Lacy earls of Lincoln see CP VII, 677. Gilbert de Lacy at head of this pedigree should be Gilbert de Gant, who was not ancestor of the Lacys.

[2] He was the son of Robert fitz Eustace and Aubrey de Lisours; d. 1190. The early part of the pedigree here does not agree with that given in CP.

[3] This Roger first took the name of Lacy; his wife was Maud of Clare; he died 1211. (CP VII, 677.)

[4] The first Lacy earl of Lincoln, his wife being Margaret de Quincy, countess of Lincoln; he d. 22 July 1240. (OBE II, 373.)

[5] Died 1258. His wife was Alice, daughter of Manfred, marquess of Saluzzo. (OBE II, 374.)

[6] Earl of Lincoln and Salisbury. His first wife was Margaret, granddaughter and heir of William Longspee second earl of Salisbury. (Ibid.)

[7] Edmund "Crouchback," son of Henry III. His first wife was Aveline de Forz, whose beautiful effigy remains in Westminster Abbey. His second wife was, not as here stated Margaret, but Blanche, widow of Henry king of Navarre and daughter of Robert count of Artois. (CP VII, 386.)

[8] Beheaded 22 Mar. 1321/22. He was never beatified, though miracles were reputed to be worked at his tomb at Pontefract.

[4] Will SS 45, p. 227; proved 30 May 1477. Her husband died 24 Dec. 1465. His monument, his wife's and his father's are in Wadworth church. (Hunter's So Yorks I, 251.)

[5] Will SS 45, pp. 246-48; proved 5 Sept. 1480. See notes ibid. He was of Aldwark, near Tickhill, his wife being the heiress of Thomas Clarell of that place. For his monument in Tickhill church and note upon his lite see YRS XXXIV, p. 108 and note.

[6] See notes on this family SS 45, p. 247. Her will was proved 13 June 1503. (SS 53, 209/12.)

[7] See notes SS 45, p. 247. Will proved 6 June 1498. His wife was Lucy Neville, daughter of John Neville earl of Northumberland and marquess of Montagu, who was killed at Barnet 14 April, 1471.

[8] Armorials: The editor is unable to explain or identify the arms of "Regat." Percy: Henry Percy in Glover's roll of Henry III date bore d'azure a la fesse engrele d'or; this, Walter Percy in Charles' roll of about the same date differenced by changing the deeply indented fess to silver. Montgomery: So borne with field gold by Nicol Montgomery in the Calais roll 1345-48. Fitzwilliam: so blazoned for William le fitz William in the Nativity roll of c. 1298. Wall's Book of Crests blazons the crest a bushe of swane fethers silver. (Ancestor XII, 73.) Scrope: blazoned with many differences in the various rolls from 1298 awards—a shield made famous by the well-known trial Scrope v. Grosvenor which resulted from a challenge by sir Robert Grosvenor of sir Richard le Scrope's, temp. Richard II, right to them.

[9] In the drawing the annulet on the bend has been omitted.

[1] The first two generations here are mythical. The first known of the family is William, son of Godric, who married c. 1169/70 Aubrey de Lisours, daughter and heir of Robert de Lisours; he was her third husband, her first being Robert fitz Eustace, from which marriage descended the second house of Lacy. (See CP V, 519, and Baildon and the Baildons for a well-documented pedigree of the Fitzwilliam family.)

[2] William fitz William 1218/19.

[3] A generation is omitted; this William was dead in 1324. His wife's name was Isabella; her will is printed SS 4, p. 50; proved 26 Feb. 1348.

[4] A generation is again omitted; this John was grandson of William and Isabel. His wife was probably not a daughter of the earl of Huntingdon.

[1] H XVI, 299, in English and four generations lower. FVY, pp. 202/04. Practically the same pedigree appears in BM MS. Add. 5530 by sir Thomas Wriothesley Garter (1491-1534) (Coll. Top. et Gen. II, 161).

[2] There appears to be no earlier authority for these arms. (AA, 3rd ser., III, 250.)

[3] Daughter and co-heir of sir Philip Darcy, lord Darcy (d. 1418) and his wife Alianore, daughter of sir Henry fitz Hugh of Ravensworth. She married before Nov. 1431; died 1461. (CP IV, 65.)

[4] Of West Harlsey, Yorks. Speaker of the House of Commons 1460/61. Died Aug. 1480. (CP IV, 67.)

[4a] She was daughter of Ralph first earl of Westmorland and his second wife, Joan Beaufort, and widow of John Mowbray duke of Norfolk.

[5] She was widow of sir Wm. Bulmer of Wilton, Yorks., and daughter of Henry Evers of Bradley, co. Durham; died March 1481/82. Will proved 2 May, 1482. (CP IV, 66 note.)

[6] William Neville, eighth son of Ralph first earl of Westmorland and his second wife Joan Beaufort. He married Joan, daughter and heiress of Thomas lord Fauconberg, about April 1422. He was created earl of Kent 1 Nov. 1461. Elizabeth, his second daughter and co-heir, was twenty-eight years old or more in 1463, and was then the wife of sir James Strangeways, who died 13 April 1488. (CP V, 286.)

[7] Will proved 3 Feb. 1501/02. She was widow of Roger Dutton when she married sir James Strangeways. (SS 53, pp. 186/90.)

[8] Had livery of his part of the lands of his grandmother Joan countess of Kent 17 May 1491. (CP V, 287 note.)

[9] Will proved 8 Oct. 1525. (SS 79, pp. 155/57.)

[10] Ormesby, Yorks., came to this branch of the family by this marriage.

[11] He was lord Kyme but not earl. He inherited Harbottle and Otterburn, Northumberland, on the death of sir Robert Umfraville (1436/37). He died April 1444. (CP VII, 359.)

[12] She was the sixth daughter of sir John Arundel and his second wife Catherine Chidioc; died 1468/69; she married lord Zouche as her second husband. (History of the House of Arundel, pp. 214 and 263.)

* The name is spelt Eure in Dodsworth throughout.

[1] H XVI, 111 differs in various details; FVY 204/05 and 607/17. SS 122, pp. 52 and 125.

[2] The families of Evers of Stokesley, Yorks. (for account of manor see VCH, No. Rid., I, 302/03) and of Belton, Lincs., were descended from Hugh and Robert, younger sons of John fitz Robert lord of Warkworth, Northumberland. Their mother was Ada, daughter of Hugh de Baliol. Their name is from the manor of Iver, Bucks., which was granted to their grandfather Robert fitz Roger by king John. The arms are differenced, by the addition of escallops upon the bend, from those of Fitz Roger (Clavering) which were themselves differenced by the bend from the arms of Geoffrey de Mandeville, earl of Essex. The spelling of the name here shows its early form and pronunciation; afterwards it became Evers, later Eurye, and so to the modern inharmonious Eure.

[3] Gave evidence in trial Scrope v. Grosvenor (Vol. II, pp. 315/17). Sheriff of Northumberland 1389 and 1398. Died 10 March 1422. His first wife was daughter and co-heir of sir Aymer of Athol. His second was the daughter of Thomas Grey of Rotherfield. (FVY 610.)

[4] Sheriff of Yorks. 1445. (H XVI, 112 note.) He was at Agincourt in retinue of lord Fitz Hugh (Nicolas, Agincourt). Died Feb. 1466/67. His wife's will was proved 30 May 1467. (SS 30, pp. 284/86.)

[5] License 12 Dec. 1432. (SS 45, p. 327.)

[6] Killed at Towton 9 March 1461.

[7] Sheriff of Yorks. 1483. His second wife, before 3 July 1497, was Constance, widow of sir Henry Percy of Bamborough (Dispensation, SS 45, p. 360). He was knighted by the duke of Gloucester in Scotland 24 July 1482. (SK II, 17.)

[8] Will proved 11 June 1493. (SS 53, p. 83.)

[9] Rector of Huggate 1485. For his later preferments see SS 53, p. 83 note.

[10] Sheriff of Northumberland 1504, of Yorks. 1506 and 1510, died 1540. His first wife was Muriel, daughter of sir Hugh Hastings. License to marry 18 Jan. 1481/82. (SS 45, p. 346.) He was knighted by the earl of Surrey in Scotland 30 Sept. 1497. (SK II, 31.)

[2] First blazoned for Thomas Boynton, who heads this pedigree, in Willement's roll of Richard II, but without the lion on the fess. The crest is given in Wall's Book of Crests: a goat sable goute silver armed gold. (Ancestor XII, 76.) Sadbury (now Sedbury) is in the North Riding, Gilling West. For account of the manor see VCH, No. Rid., I, 79/81.

[3] Will names his wife Margaret and her brother John Conyers, also his sons Henry and Christopher; proved 6 Sept. 1402. (SS IV, pp. 286/87.)

[4] His name was Henry, but FVY, p. 4, makes his brother Christopher marry the Conyers girl.

[5] Her will, proved 7 Feb. 1488/9, is printed SS 53, pp. 13/15. See note ibid. and also note in SS 30, p. 215.

[6] She was a daughter of Henry lord Scrope of Bolton. (VCH, Yorks. I, 79.)

[7] He was knighted in Scotland by the earl of Surrey, 30 Sept. 1497. (SK II, 31.) His wife was Isabel, daughter of Bertram Lumley; she died Jan. 1531/32. The fine tombstone of himself and his wife is on the wall of the tower of Gilling church with two shields of arms, one Boynton as blazoned here, the other Lumley a fess between three popinjays; it is illustrated in VCH op. cit., p. 80. [1] H XVI, 333; FVY, 269, of Kirklington brings pedigree five generations lower. For an account of this manor and its descent from the family of Musters (de Monasteriis, O.F. Moustier) to Wandesford see VCH, No. Rid., I, 372/77, and Story of the family of Wandesforde of Kirklington and Castlecomer, ed. by H. B. McCall, London, 1904. Wandesford was a manor of the Percys near Duffield. Geoffrey of Wandesford had a grant of lands in Alnwick in 1338. (Percy Chartulary, SS 117, passim.)

[2] There appears no earlier authority for these arms than this MS. The crest of a church (O.F. Moustier) comes from the Musters whose early shield bore a church (monasterium) upon it. (DS nos. 1854/55.)

[3] Blazoned for sir John Musters in Glover's Ordinary.

[4] So blazoned for sir Robert Colvile in the Parliamentary roll of Edward II.

[5] In 8 Richard II (1384) Michael de la Pole sued Alexander archbishop of York and John Wandisford and Elizabeth his wife for the next presentation to Kirklington church. Elizabeth was the daughter of Henry Musters. She was the last of her family who had held Kirklington under earl Alan of Brittany, their name probably coming from Moutiers in Brittany. (Ancestor X, 98.) She was the widow of Alexander Mowbray. (Genealogist, N.S., XIII, 178.)

[5a] Sir John Colville of Dale, beheaded at Durham 20 Aug. 1405. (NCH I, 181.) They were married before 1370. (Ancestor X, 98 ff.)

[6] Died 1463. Brass on floor of church at Kirklington.

[7] Will proved 2 Sept. 1473. (SS 45, pp. 201/02.) See note ibid.

[8] He died s.p. and was succeeded by his brother Thomas, who died 1518. He was knighted 30 Sept. 1497. (SK II, 32.)

[1] H XVI, 26, two generations lower; FVY 3. Both give the arms Brough quartering Richmond.

[2] There appears no earlier authority for this shield.

[3] In 1348 William Brough settled the manor of Brough, near Catterick, upon himself in tail male, remainder to his daughter Elizabeth wife of Richard of Richmond. (VCH, No. Rid., I, 304.)

[4] Died 1412. (FVY 3.) He adopted the name of his mother's family. For his tombstone and that of his wife see YRS XXXIV, p. 233.

[5] Died 1442. (FVY 3.) He rebuilt church of Catterick. (Church of Catterick, p. 22.) His brass and that of his wife (d. 1432) is on floor of north aisle of Catterick church; it is engraved in Raine's Catterick Church, p. 20.

[6] He died 1465, his wife 1463. They are both commemorated on the brass of their father and mother in Catterick church. (YRS XXXIV, 233.)

[7] Died 1492, brass in Catterick church (op. cit. 233). Brass engraved in Raine's Catterick Church.

[1] Part of this pedigree is in BM Add. MS. 5530 in the handwriting of sir Thomas Wriothesley, Garter. (Col. Top. et Gen. II, 160.) See also H XVI, 151; pedigree in PHY, p. 372; also FVY, 151 and FVC and W 56.

[2] Third baron by writ, died 6 April 1418. (CP VI, 196.)

[3] He died 8 Aug. 1436; will proved at Durham 16 Oct. 1436. (CP VI, 197 and note a.) His wife was the eldest daughter and co-heir of Robert lord Ferrers of Wemme and Oversley; "it took place in feast of St. Simon and St. Jude a° 9 Henry IV and the marriage portion was 440 marks." (Col. Top. et Gen. V, 316 and note w.) His will is Wills. and Invents. (SS 2) I, pp. 84/86.

[4] Will proved 30 July 1487. (SS 53, pp. 20/21 and notes.) Papal dispensation allowing his marriage with Elizabeth Fitzhugh 1 July 1435. (SS 45, 327.) His second wife is said to have been Beatrice Hawclyf; license for marriage 20 Sept. 1483. (CP VI, 198, note d.) It would seem therefore that Beatrice was his third or last wife. Will proved 5 June 1505. (SS 53, 236.) She married secondly sir Robt. Constable and took the veil after his death at Watton. (CP VI, 199, note c.)

[4a] An abbey of Benedictine nuns, Essex.

[5] License allowing marriage 29 Jan. 1432/33. (SS 45, 327.)

[6] Son of Roger Thornton, a famous merchant of Newcastle upon Tyne. (See Welford's Men of Mark III, 517 ff.) Roger Thornton II was sheriff of Northumberland in 1457. He married Elizabeth Greystock before 1428. (Ibid.) He died 1483. (HN II, i, 317.)

[7] Robert Ogle, youngest son of Robert first lord Ogle. (HN II, i, 317.)

[7a] Thomas fifth lord Scrope of Masham and Upshall; marriage settlement 4 May 1453. He died 1475. (Clay 204.)

[8] He died in his father's lifetime and without male children 17 June 1483. His second wife was daughter of Edmund Grey earl of Kent. (CP VI, 99.)

[9] Thomas second lord Dacre of Gilsland; marriage c. 1488. She died Aug. 1516; he died 24 Oct. 1525. (CP VI, 20/21.)

[2] She was Joan, daughter and heiress of Robert Conyers of Hutton Conyers, living 1347. (VCH, No. Rid. I, 403.)

[2a] Blazoned for him in Powell's roll of Edward III.

[3] Blazoned in Jenyn's roll of Edward III. William's seal is DS no. 2609.

[4] He was the last of the direct male line and died before 1400. Surtees says his daughter was named Dionisia. (SD II, 40.) Her husband was sir William Tempest of Studley Royal.

[5] Two generations are apparently missed out here, namely William, who succeeded his father Christopher about 1398, and his son a second Christopher. This William was son of the second Christopher; he married Denise, sister and heir of William Tempest, and thus became lord of Studley Royal. He died in 1475. (Op. cit.) Will proved 25 April 1475. (YRS VI, 109.)

[6] He died in the lifetime of his father.

[7] Succeeded his grandfather and died 1499. Knighted by the earl of Northumberland 22 Aug. 1482. (SK II, 20.)

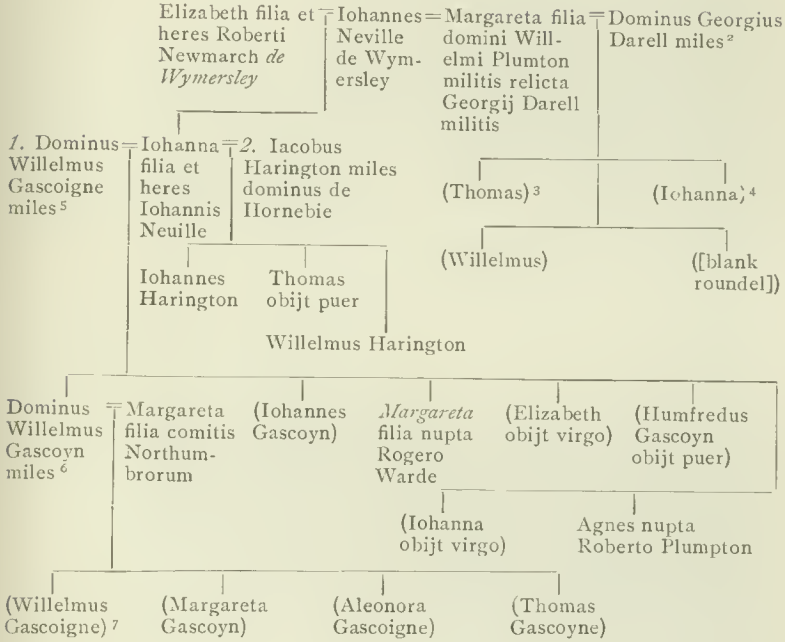
NEVILLE [1]

[GASCOIGNE]



[1] FVY 384/5 extends some generations both upwards and downwards.

[2] Died 30 March 1466. His widow, who re-married John Neville of Womersley, died 14 May 1487. She administered John Neville's effects 15 April 1484. (SS 53, p. 172 note.) For account of the Darells and their manor of Sessay see VCH, No. Rid. I, 447/48.

[3] Will proved 18 Sept. 1502. (SS 53, 172/3.) He was the last of his family, and the manor passed on his death to his sister Joan (Johanna), wife of sir Guy Dawnay. (VCH, op. cit., 447.)

[4] Wife of sir Guy Dawnay; she died in 1525 and was succeeded by her son, John Dawnay. (VCH, as above.)

[5] Sir William Gascoigne of Gawthorp. (SS 41, p. 15 note.) Made a banneret in Scotland by the duke of Gloucester 24 July 1482. (SK II, 17.)

[6] He was made a knight banneret in Scotland by the earl of Surrey about 30 Sept. 1497. (SK II, 31.) His wife was the daughter of Henry Percy third earl who was killed at Towton field in 1461.

[7] Knighted on Flodden field 9 Sept. 1513. (SK II, 38.) His will was proved 23 March 1551/52. (SS 106, pp. 234/5 and note.)

[1] See Chartulary of Rievaulx, appendix, pp. 359-362: "Successio Dominorum de Roos etc." (SS 83, pp. 359/62.) It agrees substantially with this.

[2] This shield does not appear in the rolls but is traditionally ascribed to Walter Espec; the cart-wheels should be roses.

[3] He was lord of Hamlake (Helmsley) in the North Riding, and probably son of William Spech lord of Warden, Bedfordshire, in 1086. He founded Kirkham Priory c. 1122, Rievaulx Abbey 1131, and Warden Abbey 1135. He was one of the great men of the north, a commander at the battle of the Standard, and died a recluse c. 1153. Aeldred, contemporary abbot of Rievaulx, gives a delightful account of him quoted in SS 83, p. xii. For an account of the castle and manor of Helmsley see VCH, No. Rid. I, pp. 485-94.

[4] SS 83, p. 21.

[5] Lord of Ros in Holderness; d. 1157. (CDP 181.)

[6] I can find no other authority for this shield; it is obviously a late concoction, crests were not worn till more than a century and a half later and supporters even later still. William Harvey was created Clarenceux King of Arms 21 Nov. 1557. The blazon of the three shields in this pedigree is in tinctures and later than those in the previous pedigrees.

[7] Died c. 1166. His widow Sybil remarried Ralph Daubeny. (CDP 181.)

[8] He is called Everard in SS 83, p. 360, and Clay follows this. His wife was Rose, daughter and co-heir of Geoffrey (William in SS 83, p. 360 note) Trusbut lord of Warter in Holderness. He died c. 1186. In Charles' roll of Henry III Robt. Trussebut bears the canting arms d'argent trois boutz d'eau de goules. The shield afterwards borne with many differences by the family of Ros.

[9] Furfan seems to have been a nickname. His wife was the natural daughter of William the Lion. He built Helmsley castle c. 1190. (VCH op. cit., p. 487.) The manor of Wark on Tweed was originally granted by Henry I to Walter Espec, and after Walter's death was in the hands of the crown, but by 1191 had been restored to Robert Ros, but he was not the founder of Wark castle, where there was one as early as 1126. (NCH XI, pp. 32 and 44/47.) The castle continued in the king's hands until c. 1200. (Ibid.) Died 1226/27.

[10] He died 1257/58 and was buried in Kirkham priory beneath his effigy, which was in 1682 removed to the Temple church, London, where it still lies. Its original state before restoration can be seen from the drawing in Stothard's Monumental Effigies. (I'Anson's Effigies of Yorkshire, p. 45.) His wife was the daughter of Reynold Fitz Piers of Blewleveny. (CDP 182.)

[11] Received manor and castle of Wark on Tweed from his father; died 1274. His wife was Margaret, sister and co-heiress of Peter Brus. (NCH XI, p. 37.) He differenced his paternal arms by change of colour. In Glover's roll of Henry III he bears gold three bougets sable.

[12] First lord Ros of Helmsley and Belvoir; died 1300/1.

[13] The competitor for the crown of Scotland; died 1316/17. (DNB)

[14] Died 16 Feb. 1343. (CDP 183.)

[15] Fourth lord Ros of Helmsley; at Crécy and Neville's Cross; died on way to Holy Land 1352. (CDP)

[16] Fifth lord Ros; died just before leaving on a pilgrimage 8 June 1384. (CDP)

[17] Sixth lord Ros; died at Paphos in Cyprus 6 Aug. 1392. (Op. cit.) His wife was the daughter of Henry lord Percy (d. 1368), and his second wife Joan of Orby. (Pedigree Tate's Alnwick, 415.)

[18] Seventh lord Ros, K.G.; died 3 July 1439. (Op. cit.)

[19] He was killed at the battle of Beaugé 22 March 1421/2. His wife married as her second husband Roger Wentworth of Nettlestead. (Op. cit.)

[20] Killed with his brother at Beaugé.

[21] Ninth lord Ros; died 6 March 1467.

[22] Tenth lord Ros, a Lancastrian, attainted 1460/61. Beheaded after the battle of Hexham (1464). I.P.M. 1464/65.

[23] Died unmarried at Enfield 13 Oct. 1508. (NCH, No. Rid. I, 492.)

[24] License to marry 13 June 1469. (SS 45, 340.) He was lord of the manor and castle of Etal, Northumberland; died 1495. (NCH XI, 444.)

[25] Succeeded his uncle 1508; died at siege of Tournay 1513. (NCH, No. Rid. I, 492.)

[26] Created earl of Rutland 1525; died 1543. (Op. cit.)

[27] K.G. 1458-1524. (Beltz Garter.)

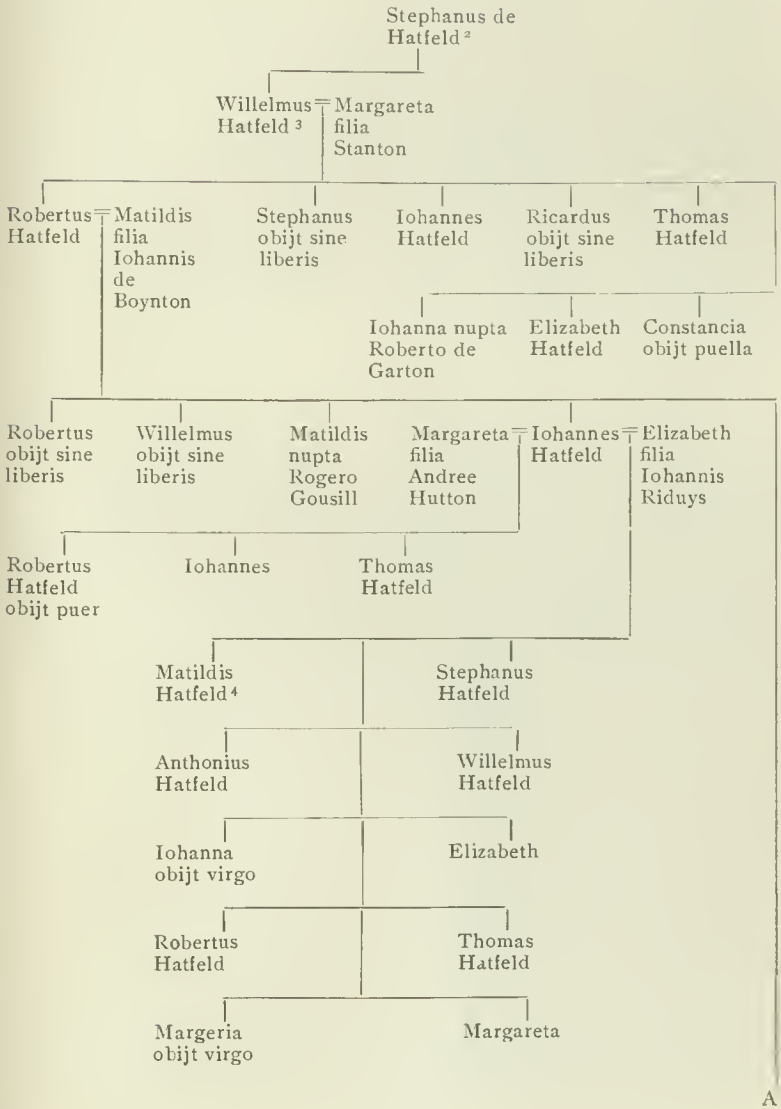
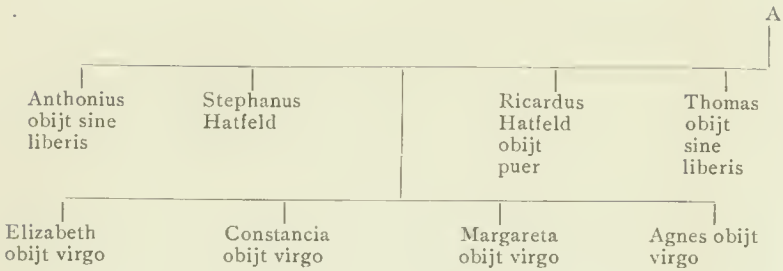
[28] Divorced by her first husband Henry Holand duke of Exeter 12 Nov. 1472. (OBE I, 713.)

(MS. Ashmole 831, ff. 86v, 87r)

HATFELD [1]





[1] Of Hatfield in Holderness.

[2] There is a pedigree of this family in Poulson's Holderness I, 442, where the pedigree begins with Walter of Hatfield temp. Edward II; Thomas of Hatfield, bishop of Durham (1345-81) is said to have been a son of this Walter.

[3] Made his will 1402. (Op. cit.)

[4] According to pedigree in Poulson she was eventually his heiress, married William third son of sir Marmaduke Constable of Flamborough, and died in 1560.
